

..... COMMON THREADS

COOKING — for LIFE —

2016 ANNUAL REPORT

A MESSAGE FROM LINDA, CHEF ART & JESUS

DEAR FRIENDS,

At Common Threads, we have always taken a joyful and affirmative approach to bringing health and wellness to children, families and communities through cooking and nutrition education. We grew by 40% in 2016, with a focus on not only expanding our reach, but also deepening our local impact and embedding our preventative health programs into school districts and community organizations.

We have prioritized developing nutrition education programs that lead to true behavior change and have conducted rigorous evaluation and external collaboration with academic experts. While creating a scalable and sustainable intervention, Common Threads has created a platform for innovation in nutrition education.

Our programs played a vital role in helping children in underserved communities learn nutrition and hands-on cooking skills, empowering them to be agents of change for healthier families, schools and communities. Our students have learned how to cook healthy meals and snacks for themselves and their families, and have also gained confidence in their own abilities, learned to appreciate other cultures and built important relationships with their peers and mentors.

Thank you for being part of our village and helping us elevate the conversation around cooking as an effective and beautiful way to take care of our families and our future. Together, we can bring more hands on opportunities for children to gain the skills and knowledge they need in order to cook for life!

IN GOOD HEALTH,

WE BELIEVE THAT HEALTHY COOKING, EATING AND LIVING IS NOT JUST A LIFE CHOICE, BUT A HUMAN RIGHT!

That's why, in 2016, we brought health and wellness to 60,000 students, parents and educators across the country through cooking and nutrition education. At the heart of our organization is a deep commitment to the children, families and communities we serve. With each passing year, we could not be more proud of where we have been and where we are headed.

NEWTEAMMEMBERS

We said we wanted to grow and we did. In 2016, Common Threads added 5 new positions to an already amazing staff. The focused team continues to work together to achieve our strategic goals. We also trained 83 local chefs to teach healthy cooking classes in our schools and community sites.

PROGRAMMING

School and community partners were able to choose from eight different programs to bring nutrition and healthy cooking education to their students and families. Our Small Bites nutrition education program is available in- or after-school and is aligned to local education standards, engaging students' tastes and minds.

Cooking Skills & World Cuisine is our flagship program that teaches hands-on cooking techniques while exploring global food culture. Our Family Cooking Classes give parents the opportunity to share the table with their children over a healthy home-cooked meal. We also host Parent Workshops, Grocery Store Tours, Healthy Teacher Trainings and Teacher Cooking Classes to build a nurturing and supportive community of healthy role models around students that values nutrition and healthy cooking.

Common Threads has built partnerships with 558 schools and community organizations to deliver our programming in nine major U.S. cities: Austin, Chicago, Jacksonville, Los Angeles, Miami, New Orleans, New York, Pittsburgh and Washington DC!

COMPLIANCE

In 2016, Common Threads continued to set new standards for research and evaluation by a community-based organization. In addition to maintaining approved protocols at our Institutional Review Board, Common Threads now has approved research and evaluation protocols in seven school districts. We adopted the Common Threads Privacy Policy and became a signatory to the Student Privacy Pledge.

RESEARCH AND EVALUATION

In 2016, Common Threads developed collaborations to build evidence for the effect of cooking and nutrition education on health. We were fortunate to work with the Osher Center for Integrative Medicine at the Feinberg School of Medicine at Northwestern University to develop a culinary nutrition and community service curriculum for medical students.

We also collaborated with the New York University Center for Study of Asian American Health on the feasibility of using dietary recall measures, and the Center for Social and Economic Research at the University of Southern California on enhancing the effectiveness of nutrition education on vegetable consumption. A collaboration with the University of North Florida in Jacksonville provided valuable feedback on the satisfaction of schools in Jacksonville with Common Threads programs.

2016 also saw the publication of the University of Chicago's evaluation of our Cooking Skills and World Cuisine program in the Journal of Nutrition Education and Behavior, as well as presentations of our work at the conferences of the American Society of Nutrition, the Society for Nutrition Education and Behavior, and the American Public Health Association.

"In my class, I learned to work together with my mother. Me and my mother can now bond through cooking. Now I have a new perspective on my foods."

- BLAIR BUTLER
WASHINGTON DC

"Common Threads has changed the way students think about eating. With the nutrition knowledge gained, they are beginning to make better choices."

2016 RECIPE FOR SUCCESS

ENGAGEMENT

In 2016, Common Threads held its signature event, the Chicago Cook-Off, to engage supporters and stakeholders in our largest and oldest market around a night of great food and fun. In Miami, we also hosted a Cooking for Life Family Takeover Day, a free event for local families to experience our programs firsthand with hands-on cooking lessons, healthy snack demos, games, live music, yoga and more. The next day, our Sunday Brunch brought together local supporters for an amazing meal cooked by celebrity chefs to raise money to fund our programs.

CT also hosted a series of expert panel discussions that brought together thought leaders from health, education, nonprofit, government and academia in Miami, LA, DC and Chicago. Our partners in all these spheres realize how critical it is to invest in the health of our children today. We are grateful to have support from individuals and organizations who have committed to giving underserved children in their communities a chance to lead healthier lives.

COMMON BYTES GOES NATIONAL

After a successful beta-launch in Miami during the 2015-16 school year, Common Threads publicly launched its digital platform, Common Bytes, in the fall of 2016 and attracted users in all 50 states. The focus for 2016 was spreading awareness about Common Bytes as a resource to supplement our existing programs and provide widespread access to our nutrition education curriculum. We added more healthy recipes to the site to support classroom cooking and built digital versions of our students' favorite games from class so that they could bring the learning home and share with their families.
